The study found no difference in haemodynamic parameters and oxygen saturation but there was a statistically significant increase in oxytocin levels and subjective relaxation in the group that listened to music versus the control group.\(^1\)

While patients were randomly assigned to the music and control groups, the two groups were predominantly male and the music group had much longer surgeries (241 vs. 190 minutes).\(^2\)

References
